The field of education is continuously evolving in response to technological advancements, changing social needs and the diverse expectations of learners. Therefore, the teaching-learning process also needs to be dynamic, innovative and responsive to these emerging requirements.

In this changing educational environment, teachers have a significant role to play. Their responsibilities extend beyond classroom teaching and include mentoring, academic guidance, research, assessment, student development and institutional responsibilities. Along with sound academic and professional qualifications, teachers need to possess updated subject knowledge, effective pedagogical skills, digital competencies and a strong understanding of professional ethics and values. With this objective, the One Day Faculty development Programme for Teaching Staff on Becoming a “FUNCTIONAL AND PRODUCTIVE TEACHER” provides a meaningful platform for faculty members at the undergraduate and postgraduate levels to reflect on their professional practices, enhance their teaching competencies and understand the importance of ethical values in higher education.
